■ By GORDON WAYNE WATTS, Editor-in-Chief, THE REGISTER//, Sun, 05 May 2024, 11:03am, EST

A friend of mine, Charlotte King, who has been studied extensively by the scientific community for her ability to hear LF and VLF sounds, as well as sense LF magnetic fields (as are some animals who use earth's geomagnetic field for navigation), is scheduled to be on Coast to Coast AM:

She has used her abilities to predict (more precisely, forecast with very high accuracy, based on her prior experiences correlating events with what she feels/hears/senses) earthquakes, volcanoes, and solar flares since 1979. Her personal website is:

UPDATE: I spoke with Charlotte, and she asked me to share her email address and phone number with my followers, as well as her website, so she could email a free symptoms "cheat sheet," and her website lists the following: "Feel free to email me privately at charking@viser.net and or call or text me at 503-999-5745.,"

While she has insisted that her forecasts are not definite and 100% predictions as to the future, and respectfully asked that news and commentary about her abilities be accurate (and not go beyond what she senses), nonetheless, in private communication, she shared that she felt that a solar filament or halo would be likely within the next 18 -- 48 hours (her text to me about this was received at 3:46am, EST by MMS text, and it is close to 11am EST, as I write).

She also conveyed that, within the next few days, a 5.0 magnitude earthquake is likely in TONGA, FIJI, INDONESIA, and JAPAN, but corrected her prediction to update me with news that a 5.4 magnitude quake hit TONGA, and to scratch that from the list of places to watch. Her exact clarification to me was to insist that she can only base her predictions on what she's experienced in the past when on what she felt and heard. That is, not a definite 100% guarantee, but an educated assessment based on facts and documented sources.

Sources I've seen in my research suggest scientists think she has around an eighty-five (85%) percent accuracy, if I recall correctly. Published research suggests she is correct in claiming that sounds can predict earthquakes and volcano activities:

From:

<https://Web.Archive.org/.../2024.../https://archive.ph/bP1od>

<https://Web.Archive.org/.../low-pitched-rumbling-rocks.../>

Additional research finds that some people can sense these sounds and/or frequencies resulting from such activity:

I am doing news coverage in a timely fashion to document her predictions, so that -- whatever happens -- there will be well-documented proof of the "time-stamp" on record as to whether it occurred before or after the event. CAVEAT: This news item is similar to the prior one, but relies on abilities to hear or sense sounds and magnetic fluctuations -- not related to dreams or visions. But -- in all cases, good reporting

⚠️ PREDICTIONS: King predicts a likelihood of earthquakes of 5.0 magnitude or greater in Japan, Fiji, and Indonesia-- within the next few days, and also solar halo or filament with the next 18--48 hours (all times from 3:46am, EST, thus morning, Sun. 5-5-2024), or less now that it's close to 11am, EST.///

Sarah, yes the headaches have been awful lately. Between the volcanoes in Alaska, and White Island, NZ, Popo in Mexico and now the Taal Volcanic eruptions in progress in the Philippines the headaches have almost been constant. I am not a medical doctor and I do not give out medical advice. But I you are able to check with your health professional and are not pregnant, you might try Meclizine .25mg. chewable. It really helps this kind of headache. The feeling of spaciness and disorientation. But check with your health care professional before trying this. Popcorn also helps, its true. Also very hot and very sweet Peppermint tea if you can tolerate it will help. These are things I have learned over time. They have helped me and numerous others. Feel free to email me

You, Joe More and Candy Lampasi

This should be the old 5.4 TONGA hit referenced by King.

Charlotte King was DOUBLE right about Tonga-- it was hit again: But look up top-- a 6.2 quake just hit INDONESIA at 2:33:10pm, EST, aka 6.2

153 km WSW of Fakfak, Indonesia

Japan too... tho not quite 5.0, it's still early yet. She correctly predicted Tonga, Japan, and Indonesia's VERY BIG 6.2,... She's accurate!!
