

Event

Is there a conservative case for mass student debt forgiveness? A conversation with A. Wayne Johnson, former head of US Department of Education Office of Federal Student Aid

EDUCATION

HIGHER EDUCATION

Thursday, November 14, 2019 | 2:00 pm to 3:00 pm EDT

AEI, Auditorium
1789 Massachusetts Avenue NW
Washington, DC 20036

+ ADD TO MY CALENDAR

In October, A. Wayne Johnson — one of the Trump administration’s senior student loan officials — announced his resignation, calling the federal student loan system “fundamentally broken.” He then proposed that the government forgive most outstanding student debt and terminate the student loan program.

Although there are few details about Dr. Johnson’s plan, many wonder if this is a turning point in the debate about student debt. Some see his plan as an emerging conservative case for loan forgiveness, but others view it as out of step with core principles.

On November 14, join AEI for a conversation between Dr. Johnson and Jason D. Delisle on the details of Dr. Johnson’s proposal, how he plans to finance it, and if there is a bipartisan case for forgiving student debt.

Join the conversation on social media with #CancelStudentDebt.

Event Summary

On Thursday, AEI’s Jason D. Delisle interviewed A. Wayne Johnson, a former senior student loan official in the Trump administration. During the discussion, Mr. Delisle questioned Dr. Johnson on whether there is a conservative case to be made for mass student debt cancellation.

Calling the current federal student loan system “unorthodox,” Dr. Johnson speculated that the majority of loan disbursements will never actually be collected. Accordingly, he proposes canceling up to $50,000 in student debt per borrower and establishing a $50,000 line of credit for new college students. He also unveiled several new components to his plan, which might include a federal income share agreement, and would finance the plan through a 1 percent tax on corporation top-line revenues.

He describes the plan as a “conservative alternative” to Democratic proposals like those forwarded by Sen. Bernie Sanders and Sen. Elizabeth Warren, since his plan would terminate the federal loan program and would allow the newly established grant to be used at public and private institutions alike. While some certainly left the room unpersuaded that this is a conservative proposal, Dr. Johnson plans to continue making the case for mass student debt cancellation.

— Cody Christensen and Warner Radliff

DONATE

Sorry

Job failed

Return to Save Page Now

The Wayback Machine is an initiative of the Internet Archive, a 501(c)(3) non-profit, building a digital library of Internet sites and other cultural artifacts in digital form.

Other projects include Open Library & archive-it.org.

Your use of the Wayback Machine is subject to the Internet Archive's Terms of Use.

Agenda

1:45 PM

Registration

2:00 PM

Welcome and introduction:

Nat Malkus, AEI

2:05 PM

Conversation:

Jason D. Delisle, AEI

A. Wayne Johnson, US Department of Education Office of Federal Student Aid (former)

2:35 PM

Q&A

3:00 PM

Adjournment

AEI Participant(s)

Jason D. Delisle

Resident Fellow

Nat Malkus

Resident Scholar; Deputy Director, Education Policy Studies

202.862.7151

Upcoming Events

Upcoming Event

Should universities be more like corporations? A conversation with UVA President James Ryan

Thursday, February 20, 2020 | 4:00 pm to 5:00 pm EDT

Upcoming Event

‘Repugnant Laws’: A book event with Keith Whittington

Friday, February 21, 2020 | 9:00 am to 10:00 am EDT

Upcoming Event

AEI Election Watch: Examining the 2020 contests

Tuesday, February 25, 2020 | 8:45 am to 10:00 am EDT

Events Calendar

February 2020

Sun	Mon	Tue	Wed	Thu	Fri	Sat
26	27	28	29	30	31	1
2	3	4	5	6	7	8
9	10	11	12	13	14	15
16	17	18	19	20	21	22
23	24	25	26	27	28	29

Subscribe to the AEI Events
Podcast on iTunes